

Chris Duarte Group – Infinite Energy (2010)

Written by bluesever

Friday, 29 October 2010 15:45 - Last Updated Friday, 16 October 2020 14:58

Chris Duarte Group – Infinite Energy (2010)

- 01 Ridin' 04'08 play
- 02 City Life Blues 08'06
- 03 Cross My Heart 03'42 play
- 04 Waiting On You 04'02
- 05 Sundown Blues 06'28
- 06 Cold Cold Day 06'56
- 07 My Heart Don't Want to Let You Go 06'10
- 08 Killing Time 08'27
- 09 Purple Gloaming 06'19
- 10 Me All Me 06'15
- 11 Hamra St. 03'58

Personnel:

Chris Duarte (vocals, guitar)

Chris Burroughs (drums)

Matt Stallard (bass)

Whatever progressions the Chris Duarte Group make on their 2010 release Infinite Energy are a matter of depth, not breadth. The group doesn't try anything new -- Duarte still specializes in a distinctly Texas brand of the blues, one that has ... Full Description Stevie Ray Vaughan as ground zero, where even the Hendrix-isms are filtered through SRV -- but they do manage to lock into a soulful groove on "My Heart Don't Want to Let You Go" and creates a noir-streaked moodiness on the instrumental "Hamra St" quite unlike anything he's done before. Elsewhere, the sound remains the same and if the production is way too clean for Duarte's increasingly rough, wobbly vocals, his guitar sounds hot and full, speaking with a warmth he can not manage, nor needs to create, as a singer. ~ Stephen Thomas Erlewine, allmusic.com

Chris Duarte Group – Infinite Energy (2010)

Written by bluesever

Friday, 29 October 2010 15:45 - Last Updated Friday, 16 October 2020 14:58

download (mp3 @320 kbs):

yandex mediafire ulozto gett bayfiles

back