Sister Rosetta Tharpe was one of the great blues gospel singers and she was one of the pioneer gospel artists who crossed over into the secular world.

She was among the first Black gospel artists to appear on television, and one of the first realize the showbiz possibilities of this new and wide-reaching medium, which was well suited to display her glittering wardrobe and the red-orange wig she occasionally wore when she hosted her own syndicated gospel music television show from 1962-1964.
