

Homesick James - Blues On The South Side (1964)

Written by bluesever

Saturday, 16 February 2019 16:23 -

Homesick James - Blues On The South Side (1964)

A1 The Woman I'm Lovin' 1:40 A2 She May Be Your Woman 2:40 A3 Goin' Down Swingin' 3:45 A4 Homesick's Shuffle 3:00 A5 Johnny Mae 3:30 A6 Gott Move 2:30 B1 Lonesome Road 3:25 B2 Working With Homesick 3:20 B3 The Cloud Is Crying 3:25 B4 Homesick's Blues 3:10 B5 Crawlin' 1:50 B6 Stones In My Passway 3:20 Bass – Eddie Taylor Drums – Clifton James Piano – Lafayette Leake Vocals, Guitar – Homesick James

Blues on the South Side is probably the best album slide guitarist Homesick James ever laid down (originally for Prestige in 1964). The stylistic similarities to his cousin, the great Elmore James, are obvious, but Homesick deviates repeatedly from the form. Tough as nails with a bottleneck, he goes for the jugular on "Goin' Down Swingin'," "Johnny Mae," and "Gotta Move," supported by pianist Lafayette Leake, guitarist Eddie Taylor, and drummer Clifton James. ---Bill Dahl, AllMusic Review

Homesick James never quite got the accolades that his legendary cousin Elmore did, but I can assure you as a huge fan of both, he is just as powerful in his playing and singing.. There is rumor that during the Fire/Fury sessions that Homesick played for Elmore as a sideman on, Homesick even played lead on certain cuts such as "Homesick's Blues" but gave the credit to Elmore who actually was playing 2nd guitar not lead. Homesick even claims to have taught Elmore the Dust My Broom Groove which is probably the most copied and emulated guitar lick ever.

This 1964 setting is just pure Chicago Blues. Drums, bass, and piano lay a mean groove and let

Homesick James - Blues On The South Side (1964)

Written by bluesever

Saturday, 16 February 2019 16:23 -

Homesick weave his slide guitar and anguished vocals through one of the best sessions I have ever heard. Standouts include the burning slow groove "Goin' Down Swingin'" and a version of the aforementioned "Homesick's Blues" that includes the Dust My Broom slide groove. I can honestly say there is not one letdown on this recording. From start to finish this is Chicago Blues the way it is supposed to be, powerful and passionate. It is a credit to Homesick that now in his 80's is still performing festival dates and occasional shows. I looked for a long time to find this whole session after getting 4 track from it on another CD, I strongly urge anyone who likes Chicago Blues and/or slide guitar to purchase this without hesitation!! ---Brian Frieben, amazon.com download (mp3 @320 kbs):

yandex mediafire ulozto gett bayfiles

back