

Lurrie Bell - Blues In My Soul (2013)

Written by bluesever

Saturday, 06 April 2019 11:59 - Last Updated Thursday, 22 April 2021 19:38

Lurrie Bell - Blues In My Soul (2013)

1 Hey Hey Baby 3:09 2 Blues In My Soul 6:01 3 I Feel So Good 4:12 4 She's A Good 'Un 4:37 5 'Bout The Break Of Day 6:09 6 Going Away Baby 4:13 7 24 Hour Blues 3:54 8 My Little Machine 5:28 9 I Just Keep Loving Her 2:43 10 T-Bone Blues Special 3:20 11 Just The Blues 6:58 12 South Side To Riverside 5:36 13 If It's Too Late 3:48 14 Blues Never Die 5:38
Baritone Saxophone – Mark Hiebert (tracks: 1,12) Bass – Melvin Smith
Drums – Willie Hayes Harmonica – Matthew Skoller (tracks: 3,6,8,9,10,14) Piano, Organ – Roosevelt Purifoy Tenor Saxophone – Chris Neal (tracks: 1,12) Trumpet – Marques Carroll (tracks: 1,12) Vocals, Guitar – Lurrie Bell

Lurrie Bell is a throwback and so is Blues in My Soul. It's the sound of classic small-band Chicago blues as played in the '50s and '60s: no flash, no showboating, and no screaming guitar...just solid ensemble playing. Of course, as the son of Carey Bell, Lurrie comes by it naturally, having learned at the feet of any number of Chicago blues legends. The set is mostly covers, but the only real warhorse is "'Bout the Break of Day," which suffers slightly from overexposure. Bell also contributes a handful of originals, with the nicely personal title track as an album highlight. Lurrie's got a gruff but soulful voice and his guitar style harks back to players like Jimmy Rogers (who he covers here twice). The album was cut with Bell's regular working band, with some tasty added horns on two cuts. If you like your Chicago blues old-school style, check out Blues in My Soul. ---Sean Westergaard, AllMusic Review download (mp3 @320 kbs):

yandex mediafire ulozto

Lurrie Bell - Blues In My Soul (2013)

Written by bluesever

Saturday, 06 April 2019 11:59 - Last Updated Thursday, 22 April 2021 19:38

back