Paul & Rebekah are a dynamic duo of blues mixed with gospel. Paul's guitar, & vocal talents mixed with Rebekah's soulful voice, are not to be missed!

The first time I heard Rebekah Meldrum sing she stood atop a flatbed trailer on the downhill end of Greencastle's Franklin Street. Belting out the lyrics to "Coattails," and anchored by Paul Holdman's masterful fret work on blues guitar, Meldrum's vocals climbed over Wasser Brewing Company's rooftop and filled air over the city's First Friday activities. Hers is a commanding voice. Firm. Strong. She owns the stage exactly the way the face of a band with blues roots should. Her range, of course, encompasses something much more significant than her impressive degrees of contralto. Yes, the precision of it really gets you. While she flawlessly changes gears from a low, seductive husk to a ringing reverberation, Holdman walks his solo up and down the neck of his fret board. It's professional. It's polished. But it's also rousing and moving, and that's the thing we remember the most after she's unplugged the microphone. ---Donovan Wheeler, nationalroadmagazine.com
