

Howlin' Wolf - London Sessions - The Blues Collection Vol.7

Written by bluesever

Monday, 30 April 2012 21:47 - Last Updated Wednesday, 10 February 2021 11:41

Howlin' Wolf - London Sessions - The Blues Collection Vol.7 (1993)

01 - Rockin' Daddy 02 - I Ain't Superstitious 03 - Sittin' On Top Of The World 04 - Worried About My Baby 05 - What A Woman! 06 - Poor Boy 07 - Built For Comfort 08 - Who's Been Talking 09 - Little Red Rooster (Rehearsal) 10 - Little Red Rooster 11 - Do The Do 12 - Highway 49 13 - Wang-Dang-Doodle 14 - Howlin' For My Baby 15 - Smokestack Lightnin' 16 - Back Door Man 17 - Killing Floor Howlin' Wolf (vocals, acoustic guitar, harmonica); Eric Clapton, Hubert Sumlin (guitar); Jeffrey M. Carp (harmonica); Joe Miller, Jordan Sandke, Dennis Lansing (horns); Steve Winwood (piano, organ); Ian Stewart, Lafayette Leake, Phil Upchurch, John Simon (piano); Bill Wyman, Klaus Voorman (bass); Ringo Starr (drums); Charlie Watts (percussion)

Chester Arthur Burnett (June 10, 1910 – January 10, 1976), known as Howlin' Wolf, was an influential American blues singer, guitarist and harmonica player.

With a booming voice and looming physical presence, Burnett is commonly ranked among the leading performers in electric blues; musician and critic Cub Koda declared, "no one could match Howlin' Wolf for the singular ability to rock the house down to the foundation while simultaneously scaring its patrons out of its wits." A number of songs written or popularized by Burnett—such as "Smokestack Lightnin'", "Back Door Man", "Killing Floor" and "Spoonful"—have become blues and blues rock standards.

At 6 feet, 6 inches (198 cm) and close to 300 pounds (136 kg), he was an imposing presence with one of the loudest and most memorable voices of all the "classic" 1950s Chicago blues singers. This rough-edged, slightly fearsome musical style is often contrasted with the less crude but still powerful presentation of his contemporary and professional rival, Muddy Waters. Howlin' Wolf, Sonny Boy Williamson (Rice Miller), Little Walter Jacobs, and Muddy Waters are usually regarded in retrospect as the greatest blues artists who recorded for Chess in Chicago.

Howlin' Wolf - London Sessions - The Blues Collection Vol.7

Written by bluesever

Monday, 30 April 2012 21:47 - Last Updated Wednesday, 10 February 2021 11:41

Sam Phillips once remarked, "When I heard Howlin' Wolf, I said, 'This is for me. This is where the soul of man never dies.'" In 2004, Rolling Stone magazine ranked him #51 on their list of the "100 Greatest Artists of All Time". ---wiki download (mp3 @VBR kbs):

yandex mediafire ulozto gett solidfiles

back