John Mayall - Jazz Blues Fusion (1972)

01. Country Road
02. Mess Around
03. Good Times Boogie
04. Change Your Ways
05. Dry Throat
06. Exercise In C Major For Harmonica
07. Got To Be This Way

I had long given up thinking this jewel would ever be released on CD. There is something about this record that just "works". It is a combination of Mayall's legendary ability to gather great talent and an exceptional live performance that really cooks. The "Good Times Boogie" cut is magical in its ability to remove you from reality. I was quite small when I first heard this album and it made me a blues fan for life. I enjoy all music genres and this is one of my top 10 recordings. I do not tire of playing it and I always wonder what it would have been like to have been at the actual performance when such talent was firing on all cylinders. The album title is a bit misleading, the tracks are mostly blues in rhythm and chord progressions, but with jazz overtones expertly scattered about. This is John Mayall's finest work. --- George Woodard, amazon.com
