

Luther Allison - Luthers Blues (1974)

Written by bluesever

Wednesday, 28 October 2009 22:54 - Last Updated Friday, 23 April 2021 10:22

Luther Allison - Luthers Blues (1974)

1. Luther's Blues 2. Someday Pretty Baby 3. Easy Baby 4. Part Time Love 5. Now You Got It 6. K.T. 7. Let's Have A Little Talk 8. Driving Wheel 9. Into My Life 10. San-Ho-Zay 11. Bloomington Closing 12. Medley: I'm Gonna Miss My Baby/Bad News Is Coming/The Thrill Is Gone Luther Allison (vocals, guitar, slide guitar, harmonica); Gene Block, Ray Goodman (guitar); Tom Curry, Paul White (piano, organ, keyboards); Bob Babbitt, Gary Beam (bass); K.J. Knight, Andrew Smith (drums).

Luther's Blues is where Luther Allison began to come into his own, developing a fluid, gutsy style full of soulful string bending. There are still a few weak spots, but the album remains an effective slice of contemporary Chicago blues. ---Thom Owens, AllMusic. Review

Originally released by Motown in 1973, Luther's Blues was not a big seller. Not that it's not a great album. It is. But maybe Motown at that time wasn't the best place to sell a blues record.

The young Luther definitely bares some resemblance to the fella who re-emerged in the '90s and blew away the blues world. Listen to the big, thick, stinging tone on the title cut and the big, soulful vocals. And to top it off, he has a very cool and funny conversation with his guitar toward the end of the tune. There are great songs, with solos that'll have you grinning ear to ear. "Let's Have a Little Talk" has a 40-second intro that lets Luther run through some changes and show his stuff. Then, it's a slow blues with a solo that can only be described as brilliant. For pure taste and a great vibrato, check out the funk of "Into My Life." There are cuts here that don't have solos, but allow Luther to show off his great voice and feel for the blues.

Luther Allison - Luthers Blues (1974)

Written by bluesever

Wednesday, 28 October 2009 22:54 - Last Updated Friday, 23 April 2021 10:22

Topping of this great package are three killer bonus cuts; a cover of Freddie King's "San-Ho-Zay" is pure fire, rowdy and fun as it gets; the funk of "Bloomington Closing Early Version" allows for nice, sinewy soloing; and the final medley (which clocks in at almost 20 minutes) is one of those things that's just a pure joy to listen to. Listen to Luther yell out a key change! You gotta love it!

Allison was one of those guys who looked like and carried himself like a guitar player. And the raw power and emotion of his singing and playing are very evident here. A nice record of the early work of one of the giants of the blues. --- John Heidt, vintageguitar.com download (mp3 @256 kbs):

yandex mediafire ulozto solidfiles global.files workupload

back