This particular recording of Charles Gounod's Romeo et Juliette, finds the principal cast members sounding much more the age of Shakespeare's young lovers than any of the other major recordings of this opera including Corelli and Freni, Domingo and Swenson, and even Alagna and Gheorghiu. The genuine sound also benefits from exemplary French diction and style lacking in the Corelli/Freni recording, in particular. Catherine Malfitano has a sweet, youthful sounding ring to her soprano that blends well with Alfredo Kraus' lighter tenor in the many duets they share. One may be disappointed that Kraus for some reason chose not to diminuendo the last high B flat of his "Ah! Leve-Toi, Soliel." Kraus had beautiful pianissimo top notes and if Franco Corelli, a truly dramatic, attack the top notes tenor could do it, Kraus most certainly should have too! The singing of Jose van Dam and Ann Murray on this recording are also noteworthy, and as always Michel Plasson leads his Toulouse forces with his signature attention to detail. Overall, perhaps the most enjoyable recording of this opera available.
