I discovered Josh Kramer's music last year by pure serendipitous circumstances. Since then, his beautiful music has made me company in many life situations, providing inspiration for both life and my own musical endeavors. His previous mini-album, Afterglow, was easily my favorite, full of emotion and gentleness, but that work has now got a worthy and an even far superior successor. In addition to being a great musician, Josh is a genuine human being who communicates with his fans a lot on Facebook and whose 2012 was a very turbulent year. All the trouble, joy and sorrow now reflect in his latest album exactly like the trees reflect on water on its cover. Along with the artist, you will experience love, loss, regret, acceptance, you will cry and smile and re-learn how to love. I have been also going through many changes in recent life and in many ways I can relate very well to Josh's emotions. Human mind works in a very strange way and fears every change, but I believe one of our goals in life is to learn to embrace change and learn how to be born and reborn all the time. This, I believe, is the message of Josh's new album, a message which is reflected in its every single song in a way no words, no book, can describe as profoundly as music of a talented and genuine composer. I am not afraid to admit - I wept several times during my first play of the album, it hit me so strongly. Do yourself a favor, buy this album, support this extraordinary composer and live the emotional story of his life. This is a masterpiece in every sense of the word. ---Vlado, amazon.com
