

McCoy Tyner - Nights of Ballads and Blues (1963)

Written by bluesever

Sunday, 22 December 2013 16:43 -

McCoy Tyner - Nights of Ballads and Blues (1963)

1. Satin Doll 2. We'll Be Together Again 3. Round Midnight 4. For Heaven's Sake 5. Star Eyes 6. Blue Monk 7. Groove Waltz 8. Days of Wine And Roses McCoy Tyner (piano)
Steve Davis (bass) Lex Humphries (drums)

As the title implies, this McCoy Tyner release is a low-key, after-hours affair. Far removed from the intensity of work with then-boss John Coltrane, Tyner stretches out on a fine mix of standards and bebop classics. The pianist, of course, always had his own fleet and rich way with ballads, in spite of the galvanizing marathon solos he became known for on live dates and his later experimental recordings with Coltrane. His ballad style is even touched with a bit of sentimentality, which thankfully is kept in check by a bevy of tasteful lines. Backed by the topnotch rhythm tandem of bassist Steve Davis and drummer Lex Humphries, Tyner finds the room to develop classic statements on highlights like Monk's "Round Midnight," Ellington and Strayhorn's "Satin Doll," and Parker's "Star Eyes." On more easeful tracks like "For Heaven's Sake," Tyner utilizes his block chord approach to meditative and romantic effect. Rounded out by solid blues sides like "Blue Monk" and Tyner's own "Groove Waltz," Nights of Ballads and Blues qualifies as one of the pianist's most enjoyable early discs. --- Stephen Cook, Rovi download: uploaded yandex anonfiles 4shared solidfiles mediafire mega filecloudio

nornar

back