La Compagnie Créole is a popular in Francophonie 1980s Guyanese and Caribbean French-speaking pop band. They originally started singing in Creole but quickly adopted French as their main language. They are known mostly for the feel-good and happy-go-lucky quality reverberating in all of their songs: popular themes and imagery include colorful rainbows, sunshine, music and harmless animals as a positive morale booster all set to Caribbean rhythms. ---last.fm

A Francophone group whose good-time Caribbean sound found a wide audience in the 1980s, La Compagnie Créole released their first album, Blogodo, in 1982. A number of albums, awards, and tours followed, eventually culminating in the 2007 best-of compilation 25 Ans de Succès (25 Years of Success). The band played in a number of different countries, including the U.S.A., Canada, France, Belgium, Switzerland, and Spain. In 2004, they recorded and released an album in Spanish and played dates as a Spanish-language act. ---Chris True, Rovi
