Marian Hemar (1901-1972), an author of poems, songs and skits; a playwright, a composer, a director of theatrical plays; also - the director of a theatre. He wrote for Qui Pro Quo, Banda, Cyganeria, Morskie Oko, Cyrulik Warszawski, Ali Baba, Teatr Polski, Nowa Komedia and other theatres and stages in and outside Warsaw.

He was born on April 6, 1901 in Lvov (as Jan Marian Herscheles). It was in Lvov that his first songs were composed. Encouraged by his success in Lvov's cabarets (such as UI, Renesans, Mozaika), he dreamed of a career in the capital. At the invitation of Jerzy Boczkowski, director of the legendary Qui Pro Quo Theatre, he left his home town for Warsaw in 1924.

On September 10, 1939 realising the impending danger, he left Poland in dramatic circumstances and took refuge in Romania. In 1940-41 he served as a soldier in the Polish Carpathian Brigade in Palestine and Egypt. From March 1942 he lived in London. He did not return to Poland after the war. He is called "the bard of Lvov, the troubadour of the London emigration". For 16 years (1953-1969) he prepared and presented weekly cabaret programmes for Radio Free Europe, in which - in prose and verse - he commented upon all the important news from post-war Poland, which also reached London. Satirical poems were interspersed with old and new songs, often recovered by a happy chance or traced and sent to him by listeners from Poland and from all over the world. In this way his own songs came back to him after many years, noted down, copied for old worn-out records. He would then recount in wonderment when and for whom they were written and first performed. And, although he claimed that "sentiments must needs be suppressed - especially in a cabaret..." he often admitted that he had his sentimental memories, when his own songs, which survived the ravages of war, profoundly moved him. "Like shipwrecked sailors, they were rescued from the world of pre-war theatres: Polski, Letni, Banda, Wegierko, Szyfman, the world of my music comedies..."

He estimated that before the outbreak of the war he had written 1200 songs. This album features 23 of the best.
