Lulu & The Luvvers

Lulu - vocals (born Marie Lawie, November 3rd 1948, Glasgow);

Ross Nelson - lead guitar;

Jim Dewar - rhythm guitar;

Alec Bell - guitar / keyboards;

Jimmy Smith - saxophone;

Tony Tierney - bass guitar;

David Miller - drums + Jimmy Page - guitar on 3, 17.

In the U.K., Lulu first reached stardom as a gutsy belter of R&B tunes, delivered with a maturity and soulfulness that belied her teenage years. This set includes her two mid-'60s British Top Ten hits, a cover of the Isley Brothers' "Shout" and the mid-tempo pop/soul tune "Leave a Little Love." Elsewhere, you get the spunky "I'll Come Running Over," which features Jimmy Page on guitar, and a raunchy cover of the obscure Rolling Stones song "Surprise Surprise" (also featuring Page). Most intriguing of all is the original version of "Here Comes the Night," later a hit for Them. Lulu performs it as an overwrought, pull-out-the-stops orchestral ballad; it's not nearly as successful as Van Morrison's rendition, but it's worth hearing. Unfortunately, this one doesn't include her surprisingly superb cover of "Heat Wave" from the same era. --- Richie Unterberger, AllMusic Review
