

The Paul Butterfield Blues Band - An Anthology: The Elektra Years (1997)

Wpisany przez bluesever
Niedziela, 15 Grudzień 2013 19:49 -

---

The Paul Butterfield Blues Band - An Anthology: The Elektra Years (1997)

CD 1 01. Born In Chicago 02. Lovin' Cup 03. One More Mile 04. Off The Wall 05. Come On In 06. Nut Popper #1 07. Ain't No Need To Go No Further, It's Too Late Brother 08. Born In Chicago 09. Shake Your Money Maker 10. Blues With A Feeling 11. Thank You Mr. Poobah 12. Our Love Is Driftin' 13. Mystery Train 14. Last Night 15. Walkin' Blues 16. I Got A Mind To Give Up Living 17. Work Song 18. All These Blues 19. East West

CD 2

01. One More Heartache 02. Double Trouble 03. Last Hope's Gone 04. Mornin' Blues 05. Just To Be With You 06. Get Yourself Together 07. In My Own Dream 08. Love March 09. Walkin' By Myself 10. Love Disease 11. Everything's Gonna Be Alright 12. Driftin' & Driftin' 13. Blind Leading The Blind 14. Song For Lee

Musicians/Line-Up: Bass – Jerome Arnold, Buggy Maugh, Rod Hicks Drums, Percussion – Sam Lay, Billy Davenport, Phillip Wilson, George Davidson, Dennis Whitted Guitar – Elvin Bishop, Buzz Feiten, Ralph Walsh Lead Vocals, Harmonica [Harp] – Paul Butterfield Organ, Piano – Mike Bloomfield, Mark Naftalin, Al Kooper, Ted Harris Tenor Saxophone – Gene Dinwiddie Trumpet – Keith Johnson, Steve Madaio Alto Saxophone – David Sanborn Baritone Saxophone – Trevor Lawrence

One of the most attractive things about An Anthology is the inclusion of some of the band's earliest recordings for the label, most of which were long thought to have been lost and wouldn't be rediscovered and released until the mid-1990s. The blistering first take of the band's signature "Born In Chicago," originally released on an Elektra Records folk compilation in 1965, showcases Butterfield's high-flying harp skills; by contrast, the version of the Nick Gravenites song that would appear on the band's debut album later that year, recorded with guitarist Mike Bloomfield, would sound much different with his participation as a full band member.

In fact, the first seven songs on An Anthology feature a four-piece version of the Paul Butterfield Blues Band with Bloomfield provided no more than a token participation. These sessions, recorded in 1964, provide a blueprint to the band's later success. Songs such as Butterfield's

The Paul Butterfield Blues Band - An Anthology: The Elektra Years (1997)

Wpisany przez bluesever

Niedziela, 15 Grudzień 2013 19:49 -

---

original, hard-driving "Lovin' Cup," offer the harp player's soulful vocals and blasts of harp tethered to reality only by the band's sturdy rhythm section. Bishop's searing solos here, and on the following cover of James Cotton's "One More Mile," are wiry, taut, and sting like an arrow to the heart. The uncharacteristic "Come On In," one of the band's first single releases, sounds less like the Southside of Chicago and more like the British blues emanating from dreary London town. --- Reverend Keith A. Gordon, blues.about.com download: uploaded anonfiles yandex 4shared solidfiles mediafire mega filecloudio

back