

Antonio Vivaldi - Concerto for Violin and Strings 'in due cori' RV 583 (2005)

Wpisany przez bluesever

Środa, 14 Lipiec 2010 19:32 - Zmieniony Piątek, 20 Czerwiec 2014 14:52

Antonio Vivaldi - Concerto for Violin and Strings 'in due cori' RV 583 (2005)

01. Largo e spiccato-Allegro non molto [0:05:20.00] 02. Andante [0:04:02.00] 03. Allegro [0:04:35.00] 04. Allegro molto-Andantino [0:06:12.00] 05. Largo [0:04:23.00] 06. Allegro [0:04:18.00] Giuliano Carmignola - violin Venice Baroque Orchestra Andrea Marcon - director

Recent years have brought a steady stream of recordings of Vivaldi concertos beyond the dozen or so famous ones, and it has become clear that his corpus of work remains a land of mostly unexplored riches. Consider the pair of Vivaldi works included on this Concerto veneziano, performed by violinist Giuliano Carmignola and the Venice Baroque Orchestra. Neither work sounds remotely like the Four Seasons and the other Vivaldi concertos most people are familiar with. The first movement of the Violin Concerto in E minor, RV 278, is the sort of piece Vivaldi's successor Tartini had in mind when he complained in reference to the elder master's music that "a throat isn't the neck of a violin"; it is a wordless but highly evocative little operatic scene, complete with mounting grimness and sudden chromatic shocks. The Concerto for Violin and Strings ("in due cori") in B flat major, RV 583, is a grand work with a highly virtuosic (and scordatura) violin part set against two small orchestras; annotator Roger-Claude Travers speculates that it was written for some special occasion. The slow movements of both of these works are of the unbearably beautiful sort that Vivaldi seemed to write with miraculous ease; the B flat concerto's central movement is a chaconne that begins almost minimalistically and expands into a cascade of pure ornament in the violin. ---James Manheim, Rovi download: uploaded yandex 4shared mediafire solidfiles mega zalivalka filecloudio anonfiles oboom

Antonio Vivaldi - Concerto for Violin and Strings 'in due cori' RV 583 (2005)

Wpisany przez bluesever

Środa, 14 Lipiec 2010 19:32 - Zmieniony Piątek, 20 Czerwiec 2014 14:52

back